Postal Rate History of China and Hong Kong, 1800 – 1845

The early postal rate history of China and Hong Kong, besides being closely intertwined with that of Great Britain, was heavily dependent on the postal facilities of India, resulting in combinations of rates of both countries for Far East mail during the indicated period. Illustrated covers are described to assist understanding of these complex rates. Besides being a compilation of the many applicable types of rates, this book includes relevant shipping information (ships, routes, itineraries, etc.), postal conventions and regulations, related postal markings, etc.

Far East Mail Ship Itineraries (FEMSI) 1840 - 1880, Volume 1

The first section of FEMSI Volume 1 deals with the Indian and Far East mail itineraries from 1840 to 1845 performed in concert by P&O, British Admiralty, EIC and private vessels. It makes it possible to trace the routing, ship names, and port dates of many covers during this period. The second section provides some updates to Mr. Kirk's monumental work on the P&O Lines to the Far East, adds detailed notes and cover illustrations related to mail delays, wrecks, fires, and the like, and extends the subject to include itineraries of the private ships and naval vessels which connected the P&O hub at Hong Kong with the rest of the Far East.
